

Things we Feared in 2020

Not long ago, I met woman who was literally shaking with fear. It was in her eyes, in her mannerisms, in her voice. I came home and off the top of my head made a list of all the things someone this year has told me to be afraid of.

I'm relating this story because I do have a fear; I fear that the psychological damage of 15 months of constant terror is taking its toll, and it's a toll we cannot afford to pay. Eventually, we will be told that the next thing that we are told to fear, is the psychological damage. I've already heard rumblings along these lines.

Here's the list, in no particular order:
